

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

The fingerprint identification system includes a fingerprint identification terminal having a function of receiving input of a plurality of fingerprint images taken from one target finger to select a fingerprint image suited for identification processing based on image quality determination and a fingerprint identification device having a function of outputting an identification result by selectively combining, for each image, one-to-N matching, one-to-one matching, fusion score calculation from a plurality of scores and condition determination of an identification score and a fusion score.